The Graduate Program

- The doctoral program in the Department of American Studies is accepting applications for Fall 2014 matriculation.
- American Studies at UNC is an interdisciplinary department with signature strengths in American cultural history and literature, American Indian Studies, Southern Studies, Digital Humanities, Folklore, and International and Comparative American Studies.
- Joining a long-standing M.A. program in Folklore, the Ph.D. in American Studies offers a depth and breadth of study needed to position students for successful academic careers.

Graduate Study in American Indian and Indigenous Studies

- Participate in a vibrant American Indian and Indigenous intellectual community committed to interdisciplinary study.
- Learn American Indian and Indigenous history, literature, anthropology, material and expressive culture, and archaeology with award-winning faculty in the top of their fields of research.
- Conduct research in first-class libraries and manuscript collections.
- Join a welcoming, supportive, and growing Indigenous campus community with American Indian graduate student groups and an American Indian Center.

Learn More

- UNC-American Indian Studies: www.americanindianstudies.unc.edu
- UNC-American Studies: http://amerstud.unc.edu
- Facebook: www.facebook.com/aisunc
- Twitter: @UNCIndigenous
- UNC-American Indian Center: http://americanindiancenter.unc.edu